

teenVOGUE

Beauty Blogger

Health

Don't spoil your beauty routine

by Jane Shin Park January 20, 2010

We all know that beauty products don't stay fresh forever and eventually need to be replaced, but honestly, amidst schoolwork, extracurricular activities, and relationship drama, who has the ability to remember exactly when that mascara tube or face cream was first opened? I sure don't, which means I might end up slathering an old, bacteria-laden lotion on my skin. (GAG!) But protecting myself from dangerous, out-of-date beauty products just got a lot easier, thanks to Beauty Alert! stickers. In one package, you get 6 stickers for each category of product life--3 months, 6 mo, 12 mo, and 18 mo--and all you have to do is jot down the date of first use on the appropriate sticker and place it on the item. (For info on when various cosmetic and skincare products expire, visit www.beautyalert.biz.) It's such a simple and inexpensive way to stay safe and prevent nasty infections, so try it out!

posted in

- Health

Tags

- beauty advice |
- beauty alert |
- health

- Permalink |
- Comments

- << previous post |
- Beauty Blogger main
- | next post >>

Post A Comment